An Atlantic Port, June 11.—Lord Northcliffe, on his way to America to coordinate British activities here as a commercial representative of the British government, arrived in the United States today on an American steamer, the Albatross. Lord Northcliffe, who is the head of the British war mission in the United States, and other British newspapers, comes, it is understood, not as a diplomatic representative, but to work for the industrial and economic lines in furtherance of the government's interests in America. In this connection he is expected to cooperate with Captain Andre Portier, French commissioner.

Lord Northcliffe issued the following statement:

The war cabinet has designated me as the head of the British war mission in the United States and I have been instructed to coordinate the work of the various British organizations already established here. Until I present credentials at Washington it is impossible of course for me to make any further statement.

"I can, however, express my very great personal pleasure at being again in America which I have so often visited and which has so many delightful associations and friendships for me."

"Nor is it saying too much when I add that the whole British people have a profound sense of grateful appreciation of the magnificent welcome accorded Mr. Balfour and his associates and the complete success of his mission."

Lord Northcliffe.

The coming to America of Lord Northcliffe as head of the permanent British mission is expected to greatly benefit the United States. ## COMPANY M HOLDS BENEFIT TONIGHT

Special Performance Held at Myers
Theatre This Evening For Company Fund.

Help Company M.—This plea has been made by the men and officers of the local company who have arranged a benefit performance to be held this evening at the Myers Theatre, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the Company Fund, and will be used by the men to purchase food and supplies after they are mobilized. The picture itself is said to be an exceptional entertainment, and is one of especial interest at this time. "Defense of Tribute" is the title of the picture film, which is the feature of the entertainment. Besides this, a very funny comedy is offered. Previous to the evening performance at eight-fifteen, the Bower City band will give a street concert for the benefit of the Company M. The picture film will be shown at the opera house, where a detail of four men will be present to explain each article and to answer any questions regarding the service, within their power. Between the reels of the picture Mr. Thoburn, accompanied by his wife, will sing a number of operatic selections. A second show will be given of there are people present. Tickets are on sale at the box office. The company fund for the benefit of which this show is given, is recognized by military men as a necessary part of the company. It permits the purchase of the necessities of life, which make the rigorous duties of the soldier more bearable, and which reflect to a considerable degree the attitude of loyalty which the community takes toward the organization recruited from it.

TAX BILL CHANGES RESENTED IN HOUSE

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)
Washington, June 11.—The senate finance committee changes in the war tax bill have stirred up intense indignation in the house. They foresee a row that may prolong the session indefinitely and delay raising the war revenue.

Seclusion Lasts All Night
The two chief conspirators, I. W. W. leaders, James Cully and Clyde Hough, were given a hearing this morning in Rockford after an all-night session in which Commissioner Mason held sixty-three for the grand jury. Fourteen of the sixty-three pleaded guilty to evading registration. All declared they were innocent of the conspiracy charge. Cully, who was born in Ireland forty years ago, said he was a citizen of no country, as no country had ever done anything for him. He has been here six years and admitted he was an I. W. W. leader. He was held in $5,000 bail.

Beasts of Membership.
Hough pleaded guilty to evading registration and not guilty to conspiracy and other charges. He was held in $6,000 bail. Hough boasted of his I. W. W. affiliations and said there were 350 members in Rockford. "I am not afraid of the consequences," he said. "I had the books until last week, but do not know where they are now."

CHARGE OF MURDER PREFERRED AGAINST ALLEGED ABDUCTOR

Springfield, June 11.—A charge of first degree murder was preferred this morning against a man named Dick Carter of Springfield, as the result of the kidnapping and death of Lloyd Keet. Carter was arrested by Paul O'Day, county prosecutor.

Springfield, normally a quiet city of some 40,000, today has resumed the even tenor of its way, after a wild Saturday night and Sunday morning, when more than 10,000 gathered in the square around which the city is built threatened to lynch the prisoners, charged with the kidnapping and death of the little boy. The crime had so aroused the populace that the suspects were today placed in jails in other counties. # FOOD BILL REPORTED FAVORABLY

COMMITTEE RECOMMENDS MEAS-URE, TO ALLOW FIXING OF MINIMUM PRICE TO PRODUCERS.

HOUSTON ASKS ACTION

Secretary of Agriculture Urges Importance of Legislation to Insure Adequate Food Supply for Nation and Allies.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)

Washington, June 11.—The second administration food control bill granting broad powers to the president was agreed to by the house under the house agricultural committee today by a vote of 12 to 3, and an immediate report to the house was authorized. Chairman Lever expects it to pass with less than two weeks' debate. The first bill, now pending, is to stimulate production of food; the second is to control distribution and price.

The bill as approved guaranteed minimum price to producers of non-perishable agricultural products under regulations to be prescribed by the president. The committee dropped the plan for maximum price on the ground that it was unnecessary. A good deal of opposition was expressed to it.

Steps Toward Prohibition.
Prohibition took more forward steps today in congress. It was decided to combine the many prohibition amendments to the food bills in one separate measure for conservation of grains, and thus prohibit the manufacture of foodstuffs into beer and malt liquors as well as distilled spirits.

The senate agricultural committee reached this decision. The senate judiciary committee favorably reported a resolution by Senator Sheppard for a prohibition constitutional amendment. A similar resolution failed last session.

Washington, June 11.—The urgent need of legislation was emphasized by Secretary Houston of the agricultural department today in a statement outlining in detail the purposes of the food bills in one separate measure for conservation of grains, and thus prohibit the manufacture of foodstuffs into beer and malt liquors as well as distilled spirits.

"Co-operating as we are with the nations of Europe in the war against the central powers," said Secretary Houston, "the task of maintaining the subsistence of the allies is at once a political and moral obligation and a military necessity. War is always destructive of production and the production of foodstuffs, since war leads to a scarcity of labor and labor is one of the chief factors in cultivation of the soil."

"In addition, the wheat crop of practically the entire world has suffered serious reduction during the past year, and the prospects for the coming year promise little or no increase in the production of this essential cereal."

"One of two courses lies open to the government. The first is to continue the war as it is present. The second is to attempt to conserve our own resources and to control our foodstuffs to the double end of maintenance of the subsistence of the allies and the protection of the food needs and commercial interests of our own people."

The bills now pending in congress provide for systematic development of our productive forces and an adequate control of distribution and consumption, to the end of conserving for ourselves and for the allies the foodstuffs provided through the stimulation of agriculture."

Houston describes the first food bill as a measure to stimulate production, and the second as one to control distribution. What is to be accomplished under each is given at length.

Deliver Folders to Janesville Homes Calling Upon Citizens to Buy Liberty Bonds.

Janesville Boy Scouts have begun their campaign in behalf of the sale of Liberty bonds.

The following announcement is made by the scouts: "A Boy Scout will deliver a Liberty loan appeal at your home on June 11, 12 or 13. It is his part in a nationwide campaign arranged by the Boy Scouts of America at the request of President Wilson."

The folder will explain how to apply for a Liberty bond on an application attached. It will call for your answer the day after he delivers the message—not later than June 14.

Read President Wilson's letter, and the rest of the folder.

Apply for Liberty bonds as you can pay for—in one payment or in installments.

Pay no money to the scout if you prefer not to, although it is perfectly safe to do so.

He delivers your application to the bank, trust company or store which you name in your application, and you may pay your money there.

The most liberal terms will be granted by the bank if you are unable to make the prescribed payments.

The scout is giving his holiday to our country. He receives no compensation but subscriptions from ten different homes will receive a war service emblem.

Will you help to make his sacrifice effective by making this safe, profitable, patriotic investment?

RED CROSS WORK AT SCHOOL FOR BLIND

Students at State Institution Turn Over Large Amount of Supplies to Local Chapter.

A contribution much appreciated by the local chapter of Red Cross work has just been completed by the pupils of the School for the Blind. It was inspected on Saturday by officials of the local committee on work and found to be most carefully made.

Twenty dozen handkerchiefs. Twenty dozen substitute handkerchiefs.

Following is the list: Contents of Box No. 8. Two dozen shoulder straps. Two dozen bed socks. Eight dozen tray cloths. Twenty dozen napkins. Twenty dozen handkerchiefs.

Twelve comfort bags. Four dozen knitted stockings. The comfort bags are the most complete and convenient of any turned in to the chapter. They have an inner lining that separates the inner into two parts, one for the stationer and similar equipment. They are all furnished with pretty little round needles and convenient pin cushions, and show the most painstaking care in their construction.

Teachers and pupils at the school have been wonderfully interested and enthusiastic in helping with the work and the loyal way they have responded to the call for services is most inspiring. They also plan to keep busy during the summer months as they have promised seventy-five pairs of knitted socks and 50 suit of pajamas to be ready when school opens in September.

C. M. & ST. P. SYSTEM SEEKS TO AID U. S. BY CONSERVATION

The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railway has sent a letter each of its superintendents offering suggestions as to how best to aid the government in its efforts to increase the supply of transportation units with existing plants, forces of skilled labor, and supplies of fuel and equipment which cannot be increased because the demand for all these far exceeds the supply. The letter says, in part:

"We are as patriotic as any other body of good citizens and the opportunity is welcomed to serve the nation and accomplish results by conserving fuel supply and in getting more efficient use and increased mileage out of locomotives and cars that are available."

"There are not sufficient men, cars, engines or other facilities in the country to move the additional traffic created by the war."

"It is important then that greater determination be made to accomplish more with the facilities that are now in service. Superintendents must command to bring about better loading and handling of cars. Trainmasters, roadmasters, trainmen and agents who travel over a division must have knowledge of what is required in the use of cars and work with the shipper and the consignee to accomplish results."

"Train dispatchers, yardmen and carmen must bring about an improvement in prompt handling of cars at terminal and superintendents should select a committee to receive and offer suggestions to make improvement as there must be no let-up on the part of the railway or the public during the war. Those responsible for releasing equipment loaded with company freight must not permit of any delay. A car should not be used for moving company freight when the shipment can be made in a way car."

"President Wilson has said: 'Let me say that the railroads are the arteries of the nation's life and that upon them rests the immense responsibility of seeing to it that those arteries suffer no obstruction of any kind, no inefficiency or slackened power.'"

"If these suggestions are put into practice the efficiency and support of the company cannot be questioned by the special committee on national defense."

WORK PILES UP FOR STATE LEGISLATURE

LARGE AMOUNT OF WORK UNFINISHED IN SENATE MAY PREVENT ADJOURNMENT THIS MONTH.

AND IS NOT IN SIGHT

of Last Week's Accomplish-Indicates Speeding Up Process Did Not Start Soon Enough.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., June 11.—With ninety bills awaiting disposition in the senate and the assembly facing a task of considering seventy bills, the state legislature adjourned last night with the work of the session far from completed.

The legislature worked only a little more than half time last week and did not accomplish a great deal. The principal measures receiving attention were the governor's liquor bill, which was passed, and the bill to reorganize the central board of education, which was advanced in the upper house.

The debate of the bill advocated by the governor, which provided for the sale of beer containing 3 per cent alcohol and which was passed in the senate on July 1, 1917, shut off for this session, at least, all effort to limit the sale of intoxicants in Wisconsin.

The central board of education bill, as amended and advanced in the senate, provides for a board of nine members, five to be appointed by the governor, the others being the governor, the superintendent of schools, the president of the university, and two by the normal schools board. The secretary of state would remain a member until January, 1918, at which time the board by the governor must be a woman.

The measure provides that the members appointed by the governor shall be members of the senate or assembly, and that the governor shall select from the appointive members. This excludes President Van Hise of the university, who is an ex-officio member of the university board of regents, and all the members except the representatives of the university and normal schools would have votes and those four would be full members with that exception.

The central board would approve all budgets of the schools "if they are within available funds and in conformity with legislative policy. No new buildings would be constructed or lands purchased except on approval by the central board. The board would have control of all capital expenditures and control of the normal schools. The bill provides that after the board has approved estimates for future expenditures, the appropriations shall be made by the legislature, and that thereafter the expenditures shall be under control of the boards of regents. The senate amendments must be approved of by the assembly.

Governor Philipp again made use of his veto power in disapproving the Wilcox armory bill, giving as his reason that the measure would add to the burden of the taxpayer a sum for military purposes not absolutely necessary at a time when the taxpayer is called upon to contribute for the defense of the country. The bill provides for the expenditure of $50,000 a year by the state to fund armories.

An effort will be made to put through a bill introduced by Senator Jennings which would permit organization of industrial boards for loaning money to persons engaged in manufacturing. One bill on this subject already has been rejected, but it is claimed the reason for its defeat was that the assembly did not understand its report.

Regulation of fish and game would be under the supervision of the Wisconsin conservation commission. The bill would provide for the conservation of game and fish. The claim is made that the new proposition offers the most feasible method of caring for fish and game.

Railroads may pay in millage for the use of the state for drainage according to a bill adopted by the senate. Little opposition is expected against the new drainage act. The conservation commission proposes. The principle change makes the obtaining of a drainage permit more difficult and gives some guarantee to the landowner. The bill provides for the drainage of lands which have been found available for drainage purposes. The discretion as to whether a district is subject to drainage and whether the drainage is to be by artificial means or by natural means is left to the conservation commission. The bill provides for the drainage of lands which are not otherwise available for drainage purposes. The discretion as to whether a district is subject to drainage and whether the drainage is to be by artificial means or by natural means is left to the conservation commission.

Industrial education will be compulsory for all children from the control of the state superintendent of schools under a substitute offered by Senator Bray. The measure provides for a board of nine members to be appointed by the governor, consisting of three employers, three employees and three practical farmers. The ex-officio members will be the state superintendent and a member of the Wisconsin legislature.

Providing for lunches for school children at cost. Creating a commission to purchase cement for state highway work. Empowering school districts to hold more than one school district meeting annually.

Limiting courts in issuance of restraining orders to prevent strikes. Providing that banks shall be assessed for taxation at the same rate to their full value as other properties in their localities.

Appropriating $5,000 for teaching of Greek and Hellenic languages at university. Appropriations for insurance department and archaeological society and reference library.

Giving Hamilton power to accept a gift of $40,000 for building a road connecting Devil's Lake with Baraboo. Giving printing board power to compile the book.

Providing for semi-monthly pay days for state employees. Several appropriations for departments in state capital.

BEAT THE SUBMARINE BY CHANNEL SUBWAY

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

London, June 11.—One of the fondest dreams of England's engineers for centuries, a tunnel beneath the English channel, will probably be realized after the war.

Sir Francis Fox has enabled correspondents to give an outline of how such a tunnel, which, burrowing one hundred feet beneath the sea-floor, could disgorge express and freight trains between England and France, and remove forever the menace of the submarine, can be constructed.

To drive a double tunnel through the grey Gneissian chalk, diverting it ingeniously at one point through the gulf, is today a simple feat of engineering, Sir Francis declared. Revolving cutters, fixed in Greathead shields, will eat through the earth like butter, and the debris can be constantly removed from the face by high-speed endless belts, discharging directly into wagons.

The Fox plan includes two tunnels, each eighteen feet in diameter, joined at intervals by 20 ft. by cross tunnels. A complete system of ventilation is to be worked by electricity. Electric trains are to bring and take away the workmen.

In case such tunnel should be seized by a hostile force, a water-lock, constructed to deal with such an emergency, will enable the adjacent military authorities to flood it with water at an instant's notice. When the emergency is over the water can be pumped out by electric power.

The English entrance to the tunnel would be commanded by the Dover forts and by men-of-war in Dover harbor. He (to second wife)—I am glad to be in this charming spot once more. She—I thought you were here on your bridal tour with your first wife. He—Yes, but I was so much in love I never saw the landscape.—Fleegende Blaetter.

Each Has His "Bit." Colonel Roosevelt called upon all Americans to do their "bit."

"Our one thought during the war," he said, "must be of service. It is not what we say that counts, but what we do. Our aim must be to secure the utmost efficiency of the nation, and the nation is the sum of the people in it."

Colonel Roosevelt scored the "conscientious objector," only a few of whom, he said, really were conscientious in their objection to military duty.

"A man who won't risk his body in war," he declared, "would not be allowed to vote in peace if I had my way."

"Outside of service let it be understood that there are no social lines of cleavage between the one who does his full duty in one position and those who do their full duty in another. Let us have their full duty that is the only test."

News Notes from Movieland

—BY DAISY DEAN—

When pretty Eileen Percy deserted the Broadway footlights recently to become leading lady for Douglas Fairbanks in "Wild and Woolly," his newest picture, the first thing the popular actor-producer taught her was the famous Fairbanks smile. A glance at the accompanying picture should prove to anyone that the fair Eileen has succeeded admirably.

TOLD AT TEA. William Russell is one of the most expert trapezists in California. Jackie Saunders says if she cannot get to war any other way she will dress in boy's clothes and trade on her name of Jackie.

Mary Miles Minter says she cannot remember the first time her picture was in the paper.

Marjorie Rameau is honored by having one of her golf scores tucked up on the wall of a country club of Long Island.

Helen Holmes is daily receiving parcel post packages of fresh vegetables from her ranch.

Charlie Chaplin is a vegetarian and his favorite vegetable is pieplant. Billie Rhodes has her golf sticks made to order because the ready-made ones are all too long.

Eric Campbell is trying to economize on his eating and now only takes half a dozen fried eggs, three chops and two cups of coffee for breakfast.

DEMOCRATIC MARY. Mary Pickford is a lady of many charms. Perhaps her greatest is, however, her democracy. She is cordial and charming to great and small alike. Those who have met her unfailingly regard her as a person of "regular folks" for or the screen she is just a quiet, retiring young woman, with a spontaneous smile and the faculty of "hobnobbing" with whomsoever happens to be her neighbor at the time.

BILLIE'S TO RETURN TO THE STAGE. Pshaw! Billie Burke's only going to be with us movie fans for a couple of months. Next September she's going back on the stage. Clara Kumming, the actress who produced two Broadway successes last season—"A Successful Calamity," and "Good Gracious, Annabelle," has written a piece for Mrs. Ziegfeld. It's to be called "Playfulness."

"What's that tune your daughter was playing on the piano?" "I don't believe it was a tune," replied Mr. Cumrox. "I think it was a joke she was playing on the piano."—Washington Star.

The echo at Eagle's Nest, on the banks of Killarney, repeats a bugle note 100 times.

Never interrupt the speech of another. This is an unpardonable sin against good breeding.

Promenader. When walking, it is not customary for a man to carry a stick if he is on a business errand. Otherwise, he should carry one. When you meet other people it is a good rule to take the right hand side. Persons instinctively do this, however, some authorities advise a man always to pass a woman on the curb side of the walk, leaving her next the walls of the building. I rather think this rule, if followed, would cause some confusion. Always lift your hat to your mother, your wife, or your sister, just as you would to any lady of your acquaintance.

J. E. N.: A well bred man will replace his hat on his head when he has removed it to talk to a woman in a public building, or as she is sitting in her carriage or automobile on the street. A man should never stop a woman who is walking to talk to her on the street. He should ask permission to walk beside her for a block or two while he talks.

"The Avenging Angel." Just now Billie's beginning her second picture, "The Land of Promise."

The first C. O. in the pictures has arrived. The conscientious objector in Ethel Barrymore's current production is a young chemist who has discovered a death-dealing explosive, but withholds it from his government because of his anti-war sentiments.

Not the least of the numerous all-time possessions by Juliette Day, are her "perfect knees." She attained the distinction while playing in the musical comedy, "Upstairs and Down."

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

New York, June 11.—For the next few days New York will be one large "Tango Party" with the best dancers of the country working overtime to find "something new under the sun" in the way of dances, and music dealers from all over the country working equally as hard to "keep time" with the dances.

The International Association of Masters of Dancing, are holding their annual convention here winding up with a "grand ball" Saturday evening. About five hundred delegates are attending.

Between three and four hundred "musically inclined" are also here attending the annual convention of the National Association of Sheet Music Dealers lasting three days.

Siamese Music. The Laos of northern Siam have an interesting reed instrument which is made up with fourteen bamboo or hollow reed pipes symmetrically arranged with a small air chamber and mouth-piece of turned wood or ivory. A tongued metal plate is inserted in a slit in each pipe, and the joints between the pipes and the air chamber are stopped with wax. The tone of this instrument is described as peculiarly sweet, and chords may be produced upon it.

A boot tree is an excellent thing to use when darning a stocking. It helps a whole lot in shaping the darns to the foot.

CIVIL ENGINEER

And there were thoughts personal as well as general. If he died, whether successful or not, men would tell about his endeavor. She would hear. It came to him afterward, when he learned how she had looked down upon him as he ran, that he had somehow felt her presence, not a presence impelling him to look up, but a presence driving him on. He lost his hat, he tore off his long coat and threw it aside as he plunged on with his precious bag in his hand. He did not dare to look at his watch, he did not stop for anything, but it seemed that he must have spent hours in that mad scramble over the water-covered rocks. He heard a deep breath of relief when he rounded the bend and struck the trail. Bad as was the going, it was nothing to what they had passed over.

Presently he broke out into the open slope and there before him was the rounded curve of the hogback, to gain which he had risked so much. Were they in time? Yes, the water in the lake was not flowing, it was only rising. Evidently the dam still held. He ran along it till he reached the narrowest part of it, twenty feet wide between water-covered valley and sharply descending ravine. The shortest separation between Fickett Wire and the Kicking Horse? The water in the lake was within three feet of the crest. The rain was coming down steadily. He could realize by the water level where he stood that it must be lapping the top of the dam now, or a little above it. He had five minutes—ten at most. He was still in time. The thoughts came to him as he ran. And as he saw the place again he made his instant plan.

He laid the dynamite down just as Murphy and Funaro reached him and stood panting, their heavy breathing, the sweat running with the rain in their wet faces, evidencing their exhaustion. From Murphy, who had been the faster, Meade took the two tripod legs, stout oak staves about an inch and a half thick, with sharp metal points. He jammed them down into the ground about five feet from the edge of the Kicking Horse ravine and about fifteen feet apart.

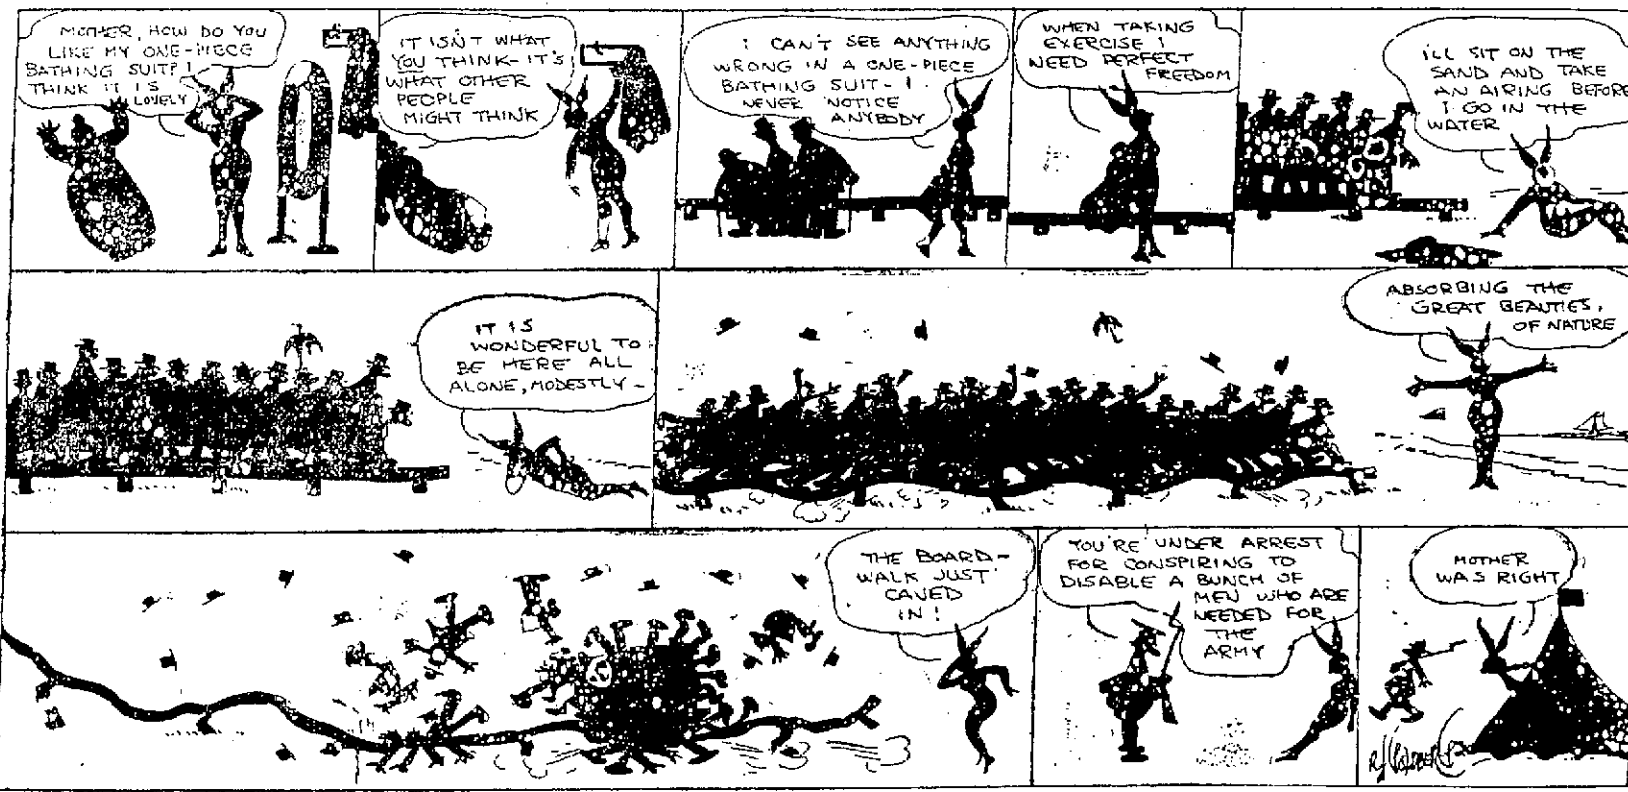

"Hold on, there," he shouted, "deep enough for five cartridges."

Funaro nodded. He knew exactly what to do. Murphy had often seen the explosive gang at work. He was quick-witted and he had only to follow the Italian's methods. The work was simple. Seizing their spades, the two men cut into the sod, using the pick to dislodge small boulders and break up the earth. The soil was light and porous, and it had been well soaked by the rain. After they had made an excavation about two feet deep, they laid aside their spades, and with the iron range pole as a starter and the bigger tripod stakes to follow, they made two deep holes in the ground, forcing the pole and then the stake into the earth, which the continuing rain tended to soften more and more. They made these holes about four feet deep below the excavation, driving in and twisting and churning the stakes by main strength.

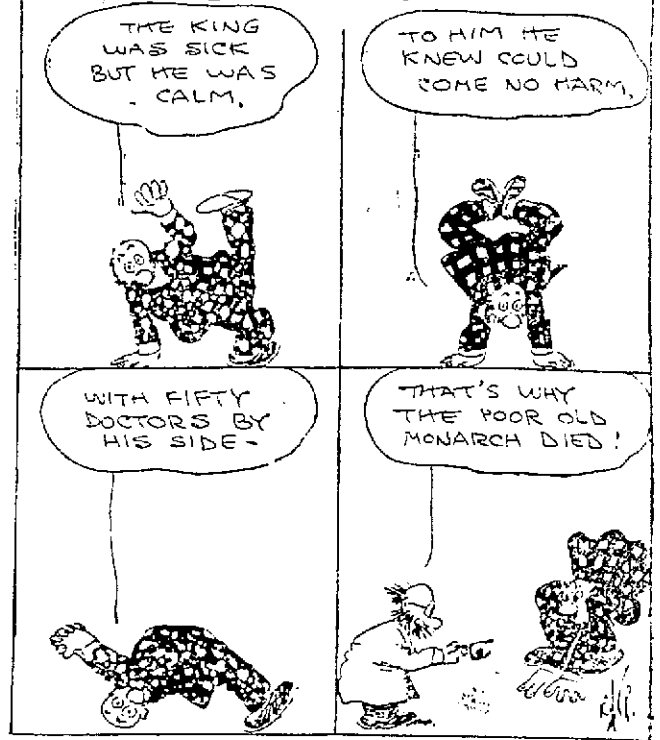

They could by no means have accomplished this save for the softening assistance of the rain and the furious energy they applied. They had been working since four in the morning at the dam, they had made that difficult run at headlong speed, yet they labored like men in a passion. They even wasted breath to call challengingly and provokingly and to see for their progress each to the other. In almost less time than it takes to tell it, they had completed the holes and so informed the engineer triumphantly.

Meade, as usual, had reserved to himself the more dangerous, if less arduous, task. Covering himself with his Murphy's discarded slicker, which he had torn into shreds, he took as his kneel down, he opened the box of detonators, selected one, and attached the fuse in position carefully. Then he unfolded the paper about one of the cartridges and placed the detonator, wrapping the paper around it thereafter. He prepared two cartridges this way with the greatest care.

The men rapidly but carefully cut slits in the covering of the cartridges, and lowered four cartridges down each hole, forcing them gently into place with the butt ends of the tripod stakes and compressing them so that they filled the holes completely. Then Meade placed his two prepared sticks with the detonators on top of the other four. He cut the fuse to the proper length in each case, and, keeping it carefully covered with the raincoat, he held it while the others filled in the holes and the excavations and carefully tamped down the earth. All that remained was the lighting of the fuse. And then? Would the dynamite go off? With fuses it was uncertain in its action at best, and although these fuses were supposed to be so prepared as to be independent of weather conditions, more often than not rain spoiled a blast. If this blast failed it was good-by dam—good-by everything.

Meade drew out from the pocket of his flannel shirt a box of matches. He had to light the farther cartridge fuse, then run fifteen feet and light the nearer one, and then make his escape. He had made the nearer fuse a little shorter so as to secure a simultaneous explosion if possible.

Tony Funaro now interposed gallantly. "Givna me da light," he demanded, extending his hand.

"G'wan wild ye," shouted the big Irishman eagerly; "I'mma do it, sor." "Stand back, both of you," cried Meade, succeeding after some trouble in striking a match.

He had cut off a shorter length of fuse for a torch, the better to carry the fire from one blast to another. As it sputtered into flame, he touched the first fuse, then the second, and turned and ran for his life after Murphy and Funaro. They had just got a safe distance away when with a muffled roar the two blasts went off nearly together. When they ran back they saw that two-thirds of the hillock on that side wet, it would not work. The precious moments were flying. They stared agonizingly at the fuse through the rain.

"I'll have to take a look at it," said Meade desperately.

Funaro and Murphy caught him by the arms. They all knew the tremendous risk in a nearer approach. The fuse might be alright still. At any second the flame might flash to the detonator and then—Yet Meade had to go. That charge had to be exploded if he detonated it by hand, he thought desperately, and he had not come so far and worked so hard to fail now.

"Don't go," cried Murphy.

"It's dangerous," shouted Funaro. But Meade shook them off and bade them keep back. What was his danger compared to the issue involved? That last charge had to be exploded. He stepped quickly toward it, and as he did so he threw his eyes up toward the gray, rain-filled heaven in one last appeal.

Did he hear the blind roar, did he see the upsurging masses of sodden earth, was he conscious of the fact that the whole side of the hillock had been blown away, that the last explosion had completed the shattering work of the first—that they had succeeded? Did he mark the whirling water, driven backward at first by the violence of the explosion, returning and rolling in vast mass through the great opening, did he see it plunging down the slope, through the trees and bushes, and pour thunderously into the bed of the ravine? Did he see the tremendous rush of the water from the great lake that man had created tear earth from earth, and ever widen and deepen the opening as it crashed in a foaming, terrible, red cataract, through the outlet, striking down great trees, roaring, boiling wildly to the bottom of the gorge far below?

No, he saw nothing. Broken, bent down by a huge boulder that had been thrown upward by the explosion and had struck him on the breast, and lying battered under a rain of smaller stones and earth, he was as one dead.

"By heavens!" cried Winters in great excitement on the crest of the hill. "He's done it. He's saved the dam; that's a man!"

"Don't you know him?" screamed Helen Illingworth in his ear.

"No."

"Meade!"

Winters caught her by the arm.

"He's dead," she cried high and shrill, "but he saved the dam and the bridge and the town. He's made atonement."

"Yes, yes; don't faint," cried Winters.

"Faint! I'm going to him."

"How?"

"The nearest way," screamed the woman, letting herself down over the cliff wall to the broken rocks, by which only the hardy could reach the lower level.

What of the dam below in the valley?

"Hold it, men, hold it; for God's sake, hold it," shouted Vandeventer, rising from his crouching position against the pulsed to resume it instantly he had spoken. "Keep it up. If it goes down, let's go down with it. Hang on—hang on! We'll hold it. We aren't beat yet."

Broken words, oaths, protestations, curses, cheers, exclamations in strange languages from the polyglot mob of men burst forth. Even cowards had been turned into heroes because they had fought by the side of men. Here and there a man not weaker physically, perhaps, but less resolute, less spiritually consecrated, less divinely obsessed, dropped out of the rank that pitted itself in furious, futile, but sublime fury against the wavering wall. Some of them fell backward and lay still. Some had fainted and some of them were half dead. A few here and there sank down on the trampled, muddy embankment and buried their heads in their hands, sobbing hysterically. But most still blind, mad, sublime, held on. And the pulsed did not fall. It did not bend back any further.

Dinner Stories

Robert Mantell tells of a barnstorming company in the west in the old days that made a try at Snake-speare. Considerable complaint was heard relative to the efforts of the man who essayed to do the ghost in "Hamlet."

One day a dramatic man on a local paper said to the leading man:

"That fellow who plays the ghost does not suggest the supernatural."

"I should say not," assented the leading man with alacrity, "but he does suggest the natural super."

A story that is going around the French papers is rather pleasant. A pretty young actress is attached to one of the Paris hospitals, and the other day, in order to make recalcitrant patients take their medicine, she promised each obedient one a kiss. All the patients were lamb-like.

The elderly matron was a witness to the scene. Next day she said to the men: "If you take your medicine I will allow you to kiss me."

The men all made gestures of discouragement.

Luckily, the lady had a sense of humor. She laughed and said: "Take your medicine, or I'll order you to kiss me!"

"If they go on teaching school-boys military tactics for the next two years I don't believe our Willie would be any good at it."

"Do you mean he's too chicken hearted?"

"No; he's too pigeon-toed."

CHINESE CABINET MINISTERS ARE DISMISSED FOLLOWING BRIBERY CHARGES SCANDAL

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Peking, June 11.—Two high Chinese officials, Chen Chin-tao, minister of finance, and Yin Ju-lin, vice-minister in the same department, are seeking new jobs here today, following the disclosures of a bribery scandal in which they were implicated.

The vice-minister when called before President Li Yuan-hung, admitted that the finance department had accepted $100,000 (gold) from a syndicate which put forward a scheme last January for buying and melting brass coins.

President Li Yuan-hung investigated the charges. Then he issued a mandate dismissing the officials. Criminal proceedings may be instituted against them.

TO HELP YOUNG GIRLS

A Mother Wants Her Letter Published.

Eaton, Ill.—"I wish you would publish this letter for the benefit of young girls. My daughter suffered greatly from female trouble with cramps, and headache, and backache most of the time. She never felt like working and it seemed as though she was sick all the time. I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has helped her in every way, in fact it has really cured her, for she no longer has periodic pains, and no more headaches or backache, and I want all young girls who suffer as she did to know about it."

—Mrs. ALMA MILLS, Eaton, Ill.

Another Girl's Experience.

New Castle, Ind.—"From the time I was eleven years old until I was seventeen I suffered each month so I had to be in bed. I had headache, backache and such pains I would cramp double every month. I did not know what it was to be easy a minute. My health was all run down and the doctors did not do me any good. A neighbor told my mother about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took it, and now I feel like a new person. I don't suffer any more and I am regular every month." —Mrs. AGEL HAN, Ton, 322 South 15th St., New Castle, Ind.

Girls who are troubled as these young women were, should immediately seek restoration to health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

of the ravine had gone. A wall of earth through which water was already trickling rose between the great gap they had blown out and the lake, the upper level of which was much higher than the bottom of the great crater they had opened.

"Hurrah," yelled Meade, the others joining in his triumphant shout. "Now, another hole right there," he pointed to the foot of the bank. "Drive it in slanting and it will do the job."

"Will the dam be after holdin' yit, sor?" asked Mike Murphy, seizing his pick.

"I hope so, but, for God's sake, hurry."

With two men working, the last hole was completed before Meade was ready. Funaro, indeed, came to his assistance in preparing the cartridge. Presently all was completed. Rejecting the pleas of both men, Meade struck the match, and this time, since there was but one blast to be fired, he touched it directly to the fuse and waited a second to see that it had caught and ran as before.

At a safe distance they drew back and waited. Nothing happened. A few seconds dragged on. They saw no sign of life in the fuse, no light. In spite of the care they had taken, it had got
